NFAC DIRECTOR TO RETIRE

Robert Bowie, the Director of the National Foreign Assessment Center, has just informed me that he intends to retire in mid-August after two and a half years in his present capacity and after many years of other Government service. Mr. Bowie's departure will be a big loss for all of us and especially for me. I have leaned very heavily on his advice over these recent years. His contributions to the Agency and to the Intelligence Community have been of critical importance. He was the first Director of NFAC, watching over its creation and building its current organization. He will be sorely missed but he goes to a richly deserved retirement with our highest esteem and warmest wishes.

MEDIA REPORT RE CIA CONTRACT EMPLOYEE

A media report today suggests that there was something sinister involving the Agency and the files of the House Assassinations Committee. I want to assure you that this is simply not the case.
